What is Extremism?

The definition of extremism is “vocal or active opposition to fundamental British values, including democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty and mutual respect and tolerance for those with different faiths and beliefs.” We also include in our definition of extremism - “calls for the death of members of our armed forces, whether in this country or overseas.”

What are British Values?

'Fundamental British values' are:

- democracy
- the rule of law
- individual liberty and mutual respect
- tolerance of those with different faiths and beliefs.

What should I look for?

Indicators that a young person is engaged with an extremist group, cause or ideology

- Spending increasing time in the company of other expected extremists
- Changing their style of dress or personal appearance to fit with the group
- Their day-to-day behaviour becomes increasingly centred around an extremist ideology, group or cause
- Loss of interest in other friends and activities
- Possession of material or symbols associated with an extremist cause
- Attempts to recruit others to the group or cause

Who is at risk?

There is no single profile of a person likely to become involved in extremism, or single indicator of when a person might move to adopt violence in support of extremist ideas.

However, it does appear the decision by a young person to become involved in violent extremism:

- may begin with a search for answers to questions about identity, faith and belonging.
- may be driven by the desire for 'adventure' and excitement
- may be driven by a desire to enhance the self-esteem of the individual and promote their 'street cred'
- is likely to involve identification with a charismatic individual and attraction to a group which can offer identity, a social network and support
- is likely to be fuelled by a sense of grievance that can be triggered by personal experiences of racism or discrimination
